"...the best class that I have attended" -U.S. Department of Justice-

Eliciting the truth is no longer a game of chance as this class offers a groundbreaking approach to identifying truth and deception for new and seasoned officers or investigators. Established in 1998, our firm remains the first, and still the only, teaching Forensic Behavioral Analysis (FBA) and Forensic Statement Analysis (FSA), not handwriting analysis, in one comprehensive class. This innovative combination not only reduces classroom time, but the seamless integration of these tools reduces investigation time while enhancing your ability to close cases and increase safety. Using FBA you will learn to read the tell-tale signs of non-verbal body language, eye assessing queues, and normal baseline patterns. FSA is a proven method to identify truth and deception in oral and written statements through the systematic analysis of each use/omission of words, phrases, content, and grammar. FSA is so powerful, in many cases a person's own words can be transposed into numbers to identify a truthful, balanced statement. Start interviewing the new way with FBA & FSA and empower yourself to elicit reliable, court accepted information and confessions.
